Tried to Convert the Sultan.
The first Englishwoman to have speech with a sultan of Turkey was Mary Fisher, a Quakeress, who, in 1697, undertook to convert the commander of the faithful to Christianity. She traveled by water to Smyrna and then tramped to Adrianople, about 600 miles away, where Mohammed IV. was encamped with his army. After many attempts, Mary found some one bold enough to tell the grand vizier that "a woman was come who had something to declare from the great God to the sultan." He arranged for an audience with his master at which three dragoners, and Mohammed was so impressed with what he heard that, while unwilling to become a Christian, he desired that Mary should stay in his dominions. When she insisted on returning, he offered her an escort, adding, "I would not for anything that you should come to the least hurt." She got back safely to England and was honored ever after among her fellow Quakers as "she that spake to the Grand Turk."—London Chronicle.

The Massachusetts State Federation of Labor will attempt to amend the one day's rest in seven law, which excludes from its provision employees of gas and electric manufacturers, drug stores, livery stables, garages and other public or semi-public servants, including employees of hotels and restaurants. The unions have filed a bill which would annul the exemption of hotel and restaurant employees.
